RAISING A READER

Toddlers, 2 – 3 years of age

Becoming a good reader is one of the greatest factors of success in school and in adult life. Children who are read to from the start will learn to appreciate reading as a pleasurable activity and are ready to benefit from the educational opportunities presented throughout their school years.

Encourage the enjoyment of reading by holding your child on your lap or cuddling the child closely while you read; establishing a regular time every day as your reading time. Use different voices for different characters in the story. Allow time for the child to interrupt, ask questions, or discuss the story with you during and after your reading. Expect your child to wish to have you read a favorite story over and over again.

A two-year-old child enjoys books with pictures of familiar objects; rhyming, silly, nonsense verses; and books involving a response or an action. They enjoy books with items to be touched and felt. They love to have favorite books read to them often by caregivers, siblings, and grandparents. They gradually become able to listen to imaginative stories about “real” people, and to do so as part of a group. By the age of three your toddler may begin memorizing favorite books and “read” them to you. Then you will know that you are well on the way in raising a reader.
